Dear Dr. _____,

Leaders within physiatry who fill academic department roles in education, research, and administration often have not had opportunities to engage in formal educational and mentorship experiences focused on the responsibilities of these positions.

AAP paves the way for success in an academic setting by providing the tools and network you need:

Training for Trainers

AAP offers online and in-person educational opportunities designed specifically for physiatrists with full or part-time academic roles. Most activities offer CME credits and the opportunity to submit workshops, sessions, and abstracts.

Be Recognized by Colleagues

AAP members are known as the leading physicians in the specialty. AAP honors members of the academic physiatry community for outstanding leadership with national awards presentations and features in AAP's various publications & social media outlets.

Meet Mentors / Become a Mentor

AAP is particularly interested in fostering relationships and mentorship opportunities. Members have access to over 1,600 physiatrists from leading academic institutions allowing networking, collaboration, and sharing of best practices.

Create the Future & Enhance your CV

AAP offers leadership opportunities such as standing and ad hoc committees, councils, and task forces. These groups represent important core work areas that shape the future of specialty and train the next generation of physiatrists.

“AAP helped in my academic promotion, because I was able to have a network of colleagues from around the country who had achieved a significant academic rank.”
