Hilarity Ensues with Natasha Leggero

Harrisonburg, VA – 25 September, 2014. The University Program Board (UPB) at James Madison University (JMU) officially announces Natasha Leggero’s planned arrival on campus. Leggero has had roles in a variety of comedy movies and television shows that include Neighbors, He’s Just Not That Into You and Arrested Development. Leggero, a consistent panelist on The Chelsea Lately Show was also one of the roasters on Comedy Central’s Roast of James Franco.

“Leggero’s humor is snippy, yet still cute.” Exclaimed Mark Gould, a writer for the popular website The Laugh Button, “Although not the most offensive comedian, yet delightfully inappropriate, and just as funny as any of her peers.”

Leggero just recently released her stand-up album titled, Coke Money. It received stellar reviews from critics. “It doesn’t take a long time to listen to the album to realize that bravado is the main tool in her box” Gould stated, “Natasha knows she looks good, and she knows she’s hilarious, and we’re all helpless. Laughing is the only real option here.”

The show will take place at Wilson Hall on October 18, 2014. Tickets are on sale at www.jmutickets.com and they will be $8.00 for students and $10.00 for the public. Tickets will also be available at the door and they will be $10.00 for students and $12.00 for the public.

In the past UPB has brought such comedians as, Erik Griffen, Nasim Pedrad and Jay Pharaoh. UPB’s most recent act, last spring, was a sold out show with Nicole Byer and Alice Wetterlund from Girl Code. “I have never seen that much hype for a comedian show at JMU and I have never seen Wilson Hall that flooded with students,” stated Janice Yahner, a member of the special events committee of UPB.

“We are all very excited to bring Natasha Leggero to JMU and I hope that the rest of the community is as excited as we are,” stated Yahner. “This event is going to be one that you cannot miss!”
